

Abstract: ?대구

Exploring the Philosophy of Unification Language

Yong-Kun Ko

Koreans had communicated with each other by processing or making practical application of Chinese characters in ancient ages and did informally their writing life with their national writing system since middle ages; they developed national language by defending against Japanese Imperialism. Since the division of Korean peninsula in 1945, South Korea has been unfolded the National Language Purification Movement, North Korea have done the Cultured Language Movement respectively. We could formulate the Philosophy of Development of National Language, if two language movement could be integrated dialectically. The Philosophy of Development of National Language indicates a meta-theory for developing of word-formation rooted in Korean inherent language property and the writing skill being in harmony with Korean breath from near perspective viewpoint and could make a basis for the security of the identity of language culture preparing the coming information society. The writer proposes that Koreans could lead the world culture by unfolding National Language Purification Movement pan nationally and integrating two divided language culture.